Gleeds' in-house sustainability advisor in the Ukraine, Tetiana Kanashchuk, has been licensed under the BREEAM International New Construction 2016 scheme and listed on Greenbooklive, the online reference database of environmental services and products recognised by BRE Global.

BREEAM is the world's foremost environmental assessment method and rating system with over 500,000 buildings certified and over two millions registered for assessment in 81 countries. Three buildings are currently BREEAM certified in Ukraine - two in Lviv (an office building and a shopping centre) and one in Kyiv (an office building). Several further schemes are awaiting certification at present.

Svitlana Bozhko, General Director, Gleeds in Ukraine, said: "As a leading consultant in the property and construction sector, the championing of model sustainability standards is deeply rooted in our approach. Building on our well-established BREEAM / LEED advisory services in Poland, in line with growing market demand we have obtained a licence for a local Russian / English speaking assessor. This new accreditation will allow us to enhance our current capabilities and meet clients' needs more efficiently not only in Ukraine, but in other countries of the CIS as well".
